Join us for a science-filled morning. High Touch High Tech of the Twin Cities will lead us in three hands-on science activities.

Vibration Station Junior scientists will explore the world of sound through movement. Students will experience how sound waves move, how vibration of air particles make sound, how pitch changes with speed and how humans perceive sound. Students will build a vibration harmonica to take home that will demonstrate how pitch and tone can will change by the amount of vibration provided. Take Home – Vibration Harmonica

Up Up and Away Station Junior scientists will learn how the study of air helped us learn to fly. Students will demonstrate Bernoulli's principle of air pressure, learn how shape changes air pressure and how with enough force we can escape gravity. Students will create a Drop-Copter and/or a Strawket to investigate concepts listed above. Take Home – Strawket and/or Drop-Copter

Electricity Station Junior scientists will conduct experiments involving current and static electricity. Students will create a circuits that ring bells and move motors, gather electrons and watch them attract to each other and even make a current with their own bodies. Take Home – Static Kit
